

C++11 code 2.12.2: Sub-problem (2-12.b): function `testQuadOrderTria()` → GitLab

```
2 bool testQuadOrderTria(const If::quad::QuadRule &quad_rule,
3                       unsigned int order) {
4     bool order_isExact = true; // return variable
5     double my_epsilon = 1e-12;
6     // Retrieve the passed quadrature rule's reference element
7     // NOLINTBEGIN(clang-analyzer-deadcode.DeadStores)
8     const If::base::RefEl ref_element = quad_rule.RefEl();
9     // NOLINTEND(clang-analyzer-deadcode.DeadStores)
10    // Check that the passed reference element is triangular
11    assert(ref_element == If::base::RefElType::kTria);
12    // A quadrature rule involves quadrature nodes and weights defined so that
13    // the weighted sum of the value of a function at these points approximates
14    // the integral of that function.
15    const Eigen::VectorXd weights = quad_rule.Weights();
16    const Eigen::MatrixXd points = quad_rule.Points(); // (x,y) points
17    const Eigen::VectorXd x_coors = points.row(0);
18    const Eigen::VectorXd y_coors = points.row(1);
19    // A quadrature rule over a two dimensional domain is of order k if it can 20    // integrate exactly all bivariate polynomials of order k-1. The collection of 21    // such polynomials is spanned by the set of homogeneous polynomials of order
22    // strictly less than k, i.e. by the polynomials of the form
23    /* p_IJ(x,y) = (x^I) (y^J), I+J < k: */
24    auto eval_p_IJ = [&x_coors, &y_coors](int I, int J) -> Eigen::VectorXd {
25        return x_coors.array().pow(I) * y_coors.array().pow(J);
26    }; /* evaluates p_IJ at all points (x,y) as defined by quad_rule */
27
28    // Compare analytical value and quadrature sum for all p_IJ, I+J < k */
29    double exact_integral; // analytical value of the integral 30    double quad_rule_sum; // weighted sum used for approximating the integral
31    for (int I = 0; I < order; I++) {
32        for (int J = 0; J < order - I; J++) {
33            exact_integral = factorial(I) * factorial(J) / factorial(I + J + 2);
34            quad_rule_sum = eval_p_IJ(I, J).dot(weights);
35
36            // Check if the difference between the results is within tolerance
37            order_isExact = fabs(exact_integral - quad_rule_sum) <=
38                           fabs(exact_integral) * my_epsilon;
39            if (!order_isExact) {
40                return order_isExact;
41            }
42        }
43    }
44    return order_isExact;
45 }
```